Editorial

International investment law has the portrait of an increasingly better defined law in its individualization, a starting point for our magazine that aims to explore it in its entirety and monitor future developments in this field.

Our goal is to conduct analysis in all components of this domain and not only in theory or jurisprudence, so are welcome from specialists studies and articles regarding on historical considerations, sources and principles of international investment law, participants in investment relations, the definition, the forms and the classification of the foreign investments, the analysis of the investment treaties including the treatment standards and, of course, the way in which the disputes settlement is carried out.

Therefore, we do not propose only a simple documentation, but we consider that our focus is on legal research which, besides its international character, cannot be limited in any way and is imposed as a systematic search and accumulation of new knowledge.

Just as the human imagination cannot be limited, international investments cannot be limited either, which are in continuous mobility generated by the phenomenon of expansion, sine qua non and evolution, being an incalculable field that constantly surprises with novelty. Today, it is no longer surprising that there are various maritime, air, space or land investments, the construction and launch of satellites, the construction of renewable power plants, the construction and operation of blood plasma fractionation and much more.

The expansion of this field has become indisputable, which is why the close cooperation of experts in this field, continuous research, debates and critical analysis is required, so as to keep up with the various issues that arise in connection with the effective legal regulation of foreign investment. Any legal system can achieve its social and economic objectives insofar as all its aspects are made known and are subject to a critical analysis with an evolutionary and harmonizing role.

Our publication - a room of legal research for international investment - aims to stand a contribution in this regard, captivating professional materials can be found here for foreign investors and for all those interested in this field, without borders.

Onward and upward!

Editor-in-Chief,

PhD. Cristina Elena Popa (Tache)